

Access the world from the Airport Region

As soon as Berlin Brandenburg Airport (BER) becomes operational, the capital region of Germany will become the new European air traffic hub. This economically dynamic region forms the point where the main transport axes between Rotterdam and Warsaw intersects the Scandinavia-South-East Europe route providing outstanding national transport links via motorway, rail and waterway.

Germany has the highest GDP and the largest number of residents in the European Union, making it the most important market in Europe. It is a top investment location as far as international investors are concerned. More and more companies are penetrating the new growth markets of Eastern Europe from their bases in the Airport Region Berlin Brandenburg.

Well-known companies and a large number of innovative SME's operating in sectors such as logistics, aviation technology, IT, optics and life sciences have set up commercial locations along the development axes and are positively influencing the business climate. Such companies are often closely connected with one another as suppliers and partners and benefit from outstanding opportunities to cooperate with research and development institutions in the environment of the airport.
